Much of this riverfront museum is dedicated to travelling exhibitions, but I've enjoyed more of the permanent displays, such as Flight Exploration and Design, and exploring our only home. I really enjoyed Miniature Kansas, a small-scale recreation from the early 1950s Kansas that includes many famous Kansas attractions and a miniature O. A large portion of the permanent exhibits is dedicated to Where Kids Rule with a three-story castle and Kansas Kids Connect where young children can plant a garden, fix a tractor, climb through layers of land to see how wheat grows and more. Exploration Place used to have two rather interesting dining options, but WaterWay Café and Egert Dining Room are no longer open. They have a Snack Bar across miniature Kansas that offers light snacks and drinks for sale. Exploring the mountains of flight and design on the miniature Kansas power table you can shop at the explore shop without paying for entry to The Scoop museum where Poop was a temporary 2008 exhibition based on Dr. Wayne Lynch's book What is Poop? Five practical exhibition areas focus on flight, Kansas, medieval life in a three-story castle, imaginative spaces for young children, and a special roaming exhibition area. At Kansas' largest domed theater, the Boeing Dome Theater and planetarium, they travel to faraway destinations and embark on unforgettable adventures during these digitally produced state-of-the-art films. There is also a snack bar, free parking, a picnic and adventure playground, an Explore shop and family toilets.
